County boosts bond issue for jail to $45M

Higher-than-anticipated bids increase cost by $3M

BY BOB DFEMAREE

With bids for the new Jefferson County Sheriff and Justice Center running higher than expected, Jefferson County Commissioners on Thursday approved a resolution authorizing the building corporation to increase the project's bond issue to $45 million.

"The bids were a little higher than anticipated," said Commissioners president David Bramer, citing the reason bonds will be increased from the original $42 million for the proposed 300-bed facility.

On Friday afternoon, the Jefferson County Jail Building Corporation met to officially amend the principal amount of the bonds to $45 million.

While the development means the county will pay slight more for the project, Bramer did noted one positive in that the county is "fortunate the interest rates have stayed where they have."

The Commissioners approved letters of intent to four contractors who submitted lowest bids to lock in those offers contingent on the sale of the bonds.

The low bids were by EH Construction of Shepherdsville, Kentucky, at $28,522,000 for general trades and site work; Hussung Mechanical of Louisville for the mechanical package at $7,337,000; Link Electric Company of Louisville for the electric package at $5,281,000; and C&T Design and Equipment Company of Indianapolis for the food service package at $462,257.

Other bids for the general trades and site work were Maxwell Construction of Greendale, Indiana, at $29,133,000 (add $260,000 with an alternate); Calhoun Construction Services of Louisville, $30,700,000; and Parco Construction of Louisville, $30,818,700.

Other bids for the mechanical package were Walker Mechanical of Louisville, $7,595,000, and Harrell-Fish Inc., of Bloomington, Indiana, $9,433,456.

Other bids for the electrical package were Banta Electrical Contractors of Indianapolis, $5,670,000, and Ready Electric of Louisville, $5,949,390.

Other bids for food service were from Stafford-Smith Inc. of Indianapolis, $470,291, and Wasserstrom Company of Columbus, Ohio, $546,130.

Rick Sauley of RLS Insurance presented the Commissioners two bids for Builders Risk insurance for the project. The lowest bid with a $53,620 premium by Travelers Insurance to provide $35 million coverage was accepted, and that's the bid the Commissioners elected to accept. The other bid with a $78,400 premium was submitted by Zurich Insurance to provide $35.6 million coverage.

In other business, the Commissioners:

City files injunction to halt North K Road swap meet

Mote pledges ruling after Friday hearing

BY MARK CAMPBELL

The City of Madison on Thursday filed an injunction against the owner of a Jefferson County farm located within the city's 2-mile buffer zone seeking to stop a swap meet, flea market and petting zoo with overnight camping from being held on North K Road near Madison.

Jefferson County Circuit Court Judge D.J. Mote held a hearing on the injunction late Friday morning with Madison Board of Zoning Appeals Attorney Devon Sharpe arguing on behalf of the city and the BZA and both Madison Director of Building and Design Brian Martin and BZA Chairman Scott Baldwin testifying.

Martin said he had received complaints about a recent swap meet and flea market that was held at property owned by Susan Smith at 2355 North K Road. He said the property is zoned Residential Agriculture and would require application to the BZA for a conditional use permit for the type of activity that took place at the site on a recent weekend and for which the group involved is advertising future events there throughout the summer.

"There were no permits in place," said Martin, noting the permit process exists to protect the city's zoning laws while allowing property owners some recourse to use their property beyond those defined uses as long as the owner can show that conditional use is no threat to public safety.

The process requires the property owner to file application with the BZA requesting conditional use. A hearing is then held where those for and against that use can be heard. Smith filed no such application prior to the recent swap meet and allowed the event to take place without proper approval and several neighbors and others sent letters, emails and showed up at last week's BZA meeting to complain about heavy traffic, parking problems and noise the event caused for neighboring properties and their owners.

Several of the neighbors mentioned that North K Road is so narrow that it is ill equipped to handle crowds and events like those staged at Smith's

Madison Municipal Airport ribbon-cutting

LINDSEY HOLLEY/WKMNews

Madison Board of Aviation Commissioners President Dick Goodman (right center) is joined by US Rep. Greg Pence (left center), airport manager Brent Spry and other state and local officials to cut the ribbon to officially open Madison Municipal Airport's runway to both south and north traffic Friday, May 21. The airport has long been restricted to only arrivals and departures from the south due to restricted air space at the former Jefferson Providing Ground, but Pence helped push through legislation allowing flights from both directions, providing safer takeoffs and landings under certain wind conditions. Bye named principal at Southwestern Middle

BY BOB DEMAREE

Southwestern School Board on Monday hired a native of Orleans — the current guidance counselor at Orleans Junior-Senior High School — as the corporation's new middle school principal.

Kristin Bye grew up in Orleans and has been guidance counselor at the junior-senior high school there the last 11 years. She will now leave home to become part of the Southwestern family.

"It seems very natural for me to be here," said Bye after her official hiring at Monday's Southwestern school board meeting. "It feels very home-like. It's a good fit for me."

Bye earned her bachelor's degree from Indiana State University and a Masters of Education degree at Indiana Wesleyan University. Later, she received a Masters of School Counseling at Indiana University Southeast and more recently a degree in administration at Oakland City University.

Kristin Bye

Bye is replacing Jason Watson, who has been promoted to assistant superintendent at Southwestern and is wrapping up his sixth year as principal of the Southwestern Middle School.

"I have truly enjoyed my time in this role. I am excited about what lies ahead for Southwestern Middle School under the leadership of Kristin Bye," Watson said. "She brings a unique mix of knowledge, skills and experiences that will benefit our students and staff. I look forward to working with her and wish her well as she takes Southwestern Middle School students and staff to new and higher levels of success."

Bye, who was a health education teacher for six years at Bedford-North Lawrence High School prior to her tenure as a counselor, said she knew when she pursued an education degree in administration that it would likely mean leaving her hometown. "I have been prepared for that. I knew that was a strong possibility," she said.

At the same time Bye said she wanted to go to a place where she would feel like she belonged.

"When I started looking, I wanted to be somewhere that I was a good fit" and the opportunity at Southwestern "was somewhere I could see myself applying."

Bye and her husband, Jeremy, have two sons, Breckin, 13, and Brayson, 9.

"I'm excited to be part of the Southwestern family," Bye said. "I am truly impressed with everything I have seen."

Hanover Park Board pleased with return of park activity

BY BOB DEMAREE

Based on preseason practices and other usage, members of Hanover's Park Board are elated with the level of activity returning to Hanover Park and that should increase even more Monday as baseball and softball seasons open.

"I think it's exciting," said board member Treva Shelton. "I've not seen kids playing on those fields for years."

"It's been 20 years since I have seen this much activity," board member Debbie Kroger added.

Parks and Recreation Director Scott Davidson said a total of 259 youths have registered — including 25 total teams with 20 from Hanover, two from Trimble County and three from Madison — with play getting underway at 5:30 p.m. on Monday after a brief opening ceremony at approximately 5:15 p.m.

Davidson said he has hired 12 part-time summer workers who have begun training as umpires, scorekeepers and concession help.

"I've been real pleased with them," he said. "They seem to be excited about it."

Most games will be played on weeknights with practice time available on weekends after noon on Saturday through Sunday if nothing is scheduled on the fields. Usage of the fields is on a first-come, first-serve basis, Davidson said.

Clerk-Treasure Keith Mefford noted there are plans for upcoming concerts at the Hanover Community Park amphitheater including an event with Matthew Williams, Frank Pearson and Friends, and Short & Company on Saturday, May 29, at 5 p.m.

OBITUARIES

James Ferguson

James L. "Jim" Ferguson, 93, of Charlottesville, Virginia and formerly of Hanover, Indiana, died Wednesday, May 12, 2021, in Charlottesville following a brief illness.

He was born on April 26, 1928, in Iberia, Missouri, to Oral Ferguson and Helen Rames Briggs, but the family moved west in the 1930s as part of the Great Depression migration, resettling in the Los Angeles area to obtain itinerant work with the family living in its car for a year when he was very young. He eventually attended community college in southern California and earned a bachelor's degree in English at Occidental College before serving in the Korean War, where he used his self-taught typing skills to work as a secretary. He rose to the rank of corporal, was honorably discharged in 1953 and returned to his academic pursuits at Occidental under the GI Bill. He completed a PhD in literature and met and married Lorice "Lori" Mittry in 1958. They had two daughters and moved to southern Indiana in 1963 when he took a teaching post at Hanover College. He remained at Hanover until his retirement in 1992 and was awarded the James A. and Sophronia R. McKee Professorship of English Literature, an endowed chair that was the first offered at Hanover in modern times. During his 29 years at Hanover he taught modern drama and literature, including popular courses on John Milton and William Faulkner. He also wrote and published Faulkner's Short Fiction in 1991. He also held many leadership roles at Hanover, including department chair and created and ran the Hanover Film Society for many years, screening classic movies for students and faculty and hosting post-film discussions in his home. He had a passion for classical music and attended many concerts and plays in Louisville over the decades. His wife died in 2003 after dealing with chronic, debilitating health issues for many decades and he continued to live in Hanover for a few more years, caring for his mother, who lived to 102, and then moved to Austin, Texas, in 2011 and lived with his youngest daughter for four years. He read voraciously, enjoying book club discussions, spending many hours doing crossword puzzles and watching his favorite sports— the Los Angeles Dodgers, golf and tennis. In 2015 he moved to Charlottesville to be near his other daughter and resided at the Colonnades retirement community for more than five years, establishing and leading a fiction class, participating in play readings, essay writing and poetry classes, and enjoying a peer group he found in Virginia.

Stepson addicted to meth

ANNIE LANE
DEAR ANNIE

Dear Annie: I started dating my husband 11 years ago, married six years ago. Our biggest problem is his 29-year-old son. This man has never held a job because he has been addicted to drugs including meth and heroin and is still using. Also, he has warrants out for his arrest. I have made it clear he can not live in our house, and I do not want him over if my husband is not home. I know his son hates me and the combination of hate and drugs does not always end well. Needless to say, he always slips his way back in, and then I blow my top, and my husband runs him off again. It is a never-ending rollercoaster. How do I get my husband to understand I am done with it? I wouldn't allow my grown daughters to live in my home, jobless and sleep on my couch, I refuse to support a grown 33-year-old man! — Tired of the Coaster

Dear Tired: Addiction is indeed a roller coaster, but you need not go along for the ride. Let your husband know — empathetically but firmly — that you are not comfortable with your stepson staying with you any longer. If he continues to let him into the house anyway, tell your husband that you will need to insulate yourself from the dysfunction and make a plan to do so, finding your own place temporarily, with a relative or friend. I encourage you to attend meetings of a support group such as Nar-Anon or Families Anonymous, which might afford you some peace and in turn clarity in the situation. And if ever you feel you are in danger, call 911. I'm sorry your family is dealing with this.

Dear Annie: I have had bad relationships with women I met online in the past. Last year, a young woman came and stayed with me from March through June and kept asking me for money. I ended up giving her $6,000 when it was all said and done. After things ended with that woman, I started talking to another woman, who borrowed $4,000 for medical expenses. Currently, I'm talking to a few women — primarily this one 30-year-old woman who lives in the same state as me. But every time I ask her to get together in person, she always says that she wishes she could but is busy that weekend. Then there's another one who's 27 that says she wants to be with me but she doesn't have money to get gas to come visit.

What is the best way to find somebody to date? Do you know of any good dating sites where you really don't have to pay a lot? Because I don't want to spend a lot of money trying to find somebody. I'm going to be 50 a week from today. — All Out of Love in Maine

Dear All Out of Love: While age discrepancies aren't necessarily deal breakers, it seems like you have a pattern of dating younger women who are looking for money. You need to break that mold. Date some women who are closer to your age and, more importantly, who have their own income. You can find better fits for you on a well-reputed dating website such as Match.com, which costs $15.99-$18.99 per month. Spending a little money up front to join a legitimate online dating community is better than using free websites and meeting people who are going to scam you out of thousands of dollars.

Whatever you do, please: Do not give away any more cash. If a woman asks you for money, see it for the red flag it is, and move on.

Let him go to voicemail

ANNIE LANE
DEAR ANNIE

Dear Annie: I am in a quandary about a situation. I am a widow. Sometime after my late husband passed away, an old friend and I renewed our friendship. At first, things were very pleasant, and I enjoyed his company. This gentleman was divorced. I believe that his former wife had an affair. I don't think he ever worked through the feelings of rejection he must have felt. He has a great deal of suppressed anger, and at times he seems to have a dual personality. I realized the friendship was not a healthy one, and we no longer see each other. I have not seen him in years.

I guess it's important to him to keep in touch by phone, and he'll call from time to time to check on me. If I'm not available to answer the phone, he'll leave a curt remark in my voicemail.

He called this week as I was packing up some boxes for Goodwill, and I could not answer the phone in time. He left a sarcastic voice message. He called four times back to back. I did not return the calls.

I don't enjoy talking to him. It's usually a rather one-sided conversation, with him talking about things of no consequence. He doesn't have a good outlook on life. I recently found out he is an alcoholic, and he lies and exaggerates things. His calls upset me.

I don't want to change my landline number or my cellphone number. Should I continue letting his calls go to voicemail? I wish him well, but it really would be best for us not to have a telephone friendship. — Feeling Guilty

Dear Feeling Guilty: That man's disease is the one leaving you curt messages, and you're wise for not returning the calls. Continue letting his calls go to voicemail, and don't bother listening to the messages. You might also want to call your phone provider to see about blocking his number, if you'd rather not let his vitriol take up space on your voicemail. I really hope he seeks help with his alcoholism, but he has to come to that point on his own. You have nothing for which to feel guilty.

Dear Annie: I read the letter today from "Beat Him to the Punch Too Soon," the lady who told her amazing boyfriend she was falling in love with him. I did the same thing when I was dating my husband, "Tom." I wish I could tell her to relax and let things develop organically. I think we can all be guilty of letting our feelings get ahead of the natural process of falling in love. When I was a teenager, my mom always said I was just in love with love; there was a different guy to pine over routinely.

After getting over the embarrassment and the anxiety of telling Tom my feelings, I let it go and embraced the process of dating and just enjoyed getting to know him better and spending time with him. I am so thankful I did. He told me he loved me seven months later. Things moved quickly after that, and we married that same year. The experiences we had while dating are some of the best memories I have. They built a wonderful foundation for what has so far been a fabulous marriage. It's a second marriage for both of us, and I'm eternally grateful that I learned to be patient. — Second Time's a Charm

Dear Second Time's a Charm: I'm printing your letter as reassurance for "Beat Him to the Punch Too Soon" and anyone else who might be fretting over having said those three little words a little too early. It's not a relationship breaker.

Congrats and best wishes to you and your husband.

ANNIVERSARY: 70TH

Louise and Jim Voss

James R. and Louise Hinds Voss, of Dupont, Indiana, will celebrate their 70th wedding anniversary on Wednesday, May 26, 2021.

They were married on May 26, 1951, in the parlor of her mother's home on the Hinds' Farm, located at 7622 North County Road 650 West in Dupont, and celebrated with a luncheon at the Clifty Falls State Park restaurant.

Louise is a retired intermediate school teacher and a former Board of Selectman member in Wilbraham, Massachusetts while James is a retired engineer. Their career travels took them to Minneapolis; South Bend, Indiana; Rockford, Illinois; and Wilbraham before they retired to that same family farm in Dupont about 25 years ago.

They had four daughters — Vicky Fransham of Houston; Linda Voss of Arlington, Virginia; and Karen Voss of Madison, Indiana; and former NASA astronaut Janice Voss, who flew on five shuttle missions until 2000 and died in 2012 at age 55 — and three grandchildren.

No public celebration is planned. The couple normally celebrates by taking a trip but Louise suffered a broken arm recently so that will be delayed until a later date.

farm endanger both those in attendance and other residents should an emergency take place requiring firefighters or ambulances.

"It's not so much the use as it is the life safety concerns," Martin said, noting the permit process is "in place to protect the public" and set parameters addressing "life safety concerns."

"The big thing with this type of event is having all your emergency planning in place," Martin added.

Baldwin, a member of the BZA for the past five years, has dealt with the North K Road property previously when Smith and a different event organizer were before the BZA in July 2019 concerning a plan to hold music events at the site under similar circumstances. That permit drew heavy opposition and was never granted after the issue was tabled without a decision.

About a dozen supporters of the recent event attended Friday's court hearing while many others waited outside the courthouse after Mote limited attendance due to the ongoing COVID pandemic but allowed the hearing to be live-streamed.

Some of those outside challenged the city's authority over the buffer zone — especially since the BZA is mostly comprised of city appointees. However, the five-member panel does include Rick Ferris, a county resident who lives in the buffer zone.

Sharpe explained that city-county relationship during his closing arguments earlier in the courtroom, noting the city and county have already resolved their concerns about Madison's authority over the buffer zone and details on who will enforce zoning laws in that transitional area. Madison holds authority over zoning and conditional usage while the county enforces issues like nuisance complaints and situations.

Smith was seated beside her son Will Smith throughout the hearing. She responded to Mote's questions but neither she not her son offered any evidence nor called any witnesses.

Mote thanked everyone in the courtroom for their courtesy during the hearing and said he will "take the case under advisement and work very hard to get a ruling out." A member of his staff said later on Friday that Mote hoped to rule by this morning.

Brett Clark, organizer of the swap meet, was one of the supporters inside the courtroom wearing a blue T-shirt promoting the family farm flea market. In an interview outside the courthouse afterwards, Clark said his group is in no way related to the group promoting music in 2019 and that he thought necessary permits were in place.

He said the event planned for today is "officially canceled" and his next move is to get with the city to see what is needed to obtained the proper permitting moving forward. However, Clark did note that with visitors coming in from as far away as West Virginia, it is likely that some people will show up at the farm and not be turned away since they are planning to camp there for the night.

Southwestern punches ticket to finals with win over Greensburg

Madison and Shawe each lose opener

BY THE COURIER STAFF

Southwestern picked up two wins in singles and got a crucial victory at No. 1 doubles to beat Greensburg 3-2 on Thursday and advance to the IHSAA Girls Tennis Sectional Championship this morning at Greensburg.

The Rebels' Elle Ford and Julia Worcester each won their matches relatively easily to give Southwestern an early 2-0 lead but finding the match-clinching third victory wasn't as easy. Autumn Harmon and Chloe Adcock finally secured the win for the Rebels when the pulled away to beat Greensburg's Mollie Pomphrey and Ella Chapman 6-3, 7-5 at No. 1 doubles.

"One doubles stayed on track with their great play and were next off the court to secure the win for us. Since Chloe has returned they have won six in a row in impressive fashion," Southwestern coach Kenny Garrett said. "Great communication is the key for these two."

Ford won her match over Jenna Foster 6-1, 6-0 while Worcester beat Abigail Hoeing 6-3, 6-1 at No. 2. In No. 3 singles, Audrey Bare fell 7-5, 6-0 to Olivia Colson.

Southwestern's No. 2 doubles team of Alli Voorhies and Syrenia Hardy lost to Janae Comer and Hailey Duerstock 6-4, 6-0.

Southwestern will face Jennings County in the sectional final after the Panthers fended off Shawe 3-2 in Thursday's other semifinal.

The Hilltoppers got wins at No. 2 and No. 3 singles but lost two other matches in three sets to end their season.

"We were very proud of our team tonight despite the tough loss. The team played much better against Jennings County this time than earlier in the season when we lost to them 1 to 4," Shawe coach Natalie Hill said.

When planning, don't forget these often-overlooked retirement expenses

"Layin' it on the line"

"There is a massive disconnect between how much money people think they'll need in retirement and their actual expenses once they no longer work."
– Stephen Dybwad

Retirement marketing tends to present highly idealized visions of retirement as a sort of heaven. In retirement, there is no work, no nasty bosses, endless sunshine, road trips, and enough time to pursue our favorite hobbies.

Unfortunately, reality often arrives in the form of overlooked retirement expense, threatening to prevent you from having anything close to your ideal lifestyle when you stop working.
Most people are very poor at estimating things, especially how much things will cost once they stop getting a regular paycheck. There tends to be a profound disconnect between what people believe they need to save to attain their retirement lifestyle and their actual expenses.

A recent bank survey underscored this kind of magical thinking, finding that over 67% of respondents believed they would need less than $100,000 for healthcare expenses when they retired. Yet an average couple in retirement will need nearly three times that amount, over $295,000!

When planning your eventual exit from the workplace, you must be sure to include realistic assessments of what your retirement cash will go.
Here are a few of the most commonly overlooked and underestimated retirement expenses.

Taxes will probably go up in retirement. Since your income will probably be less in retirement than it was when you worked, you will naturally pay less in tax, right? Not necessarily because historically, taxes almost always go up. They may even rise to a level that's could be as high as it was when you were still working.

If your retirement plan includes relocating to another state or country, you will also need to get a thorough evaluation of potential tax implications. Currently, there are only 12 states in the U.S. that do not require retirees to pay taxes on 401(k), IRA, or pension income. Some states tax retiree income more heavily than you might believe. Be sure your retirement blueprint factors in enough to account for tax increases.

Medicare will not cover every expense. Despite media efforts to correct the misconception that Medicare takes care of all retirees' healthcare needs, many people continue to believe that. Unfortunately, thinking that Medicare offers 100% coverage causes seniors to not factor in the money they'll need to pay for out-of-pocket expenses and supplemental coverage. Plus, if you have to retire before age 65, you may need to pay for private insurance coverage.

Medicare costs can escalate because Medicare is not free. Most retirees will pay a monthly premium based on income. Medicare does not cover deductibles and co-pays.

Medicare also does not cover dental expenses, vision and eyeglasses, hearing aids or prescriptions unless you purchase Part D coverage. So, it's likely you will need supplemental coverage, which comes with monthly premiums. Unfortunately, potential expenses such as these are often omitted when planning.

Long term nursing home care is also a concern. If you are 65 or older, you have a 60% chance of needing long-term care services in your remaining years. Also, the costs for long-term care services are rising nearly 4% every year.

And of course, the silent killer of retirement times, inflation. The CPI (Consumer Price Index) recently announced an annual rate of inflation for our current year at 4.2%. Also, the CPI does not include fuel and food in its interest calculations. Are your retirement investments earning 4.2%? If not, it could be time to reconsider your asset classes and make sure you have installed some level of Safe Money plan. Exposure to market risk may not the best idea if the majority of assets are needed for retirement income.

Bottom line. Many factors affect retirement success, including planning that fails to include realistic estimates of costs you are bound to encounter with age. Wise planning pulls your head out of the sand and helps you avoid making mistakes that could lead to running out of money when you retire. It's essential for you to find and build a relationship with a conscientious advisor who leaves no stone unturned. You'll benefit from having a financial expert who isn't afraid to tell you the truth about your money.
